

Happy International Women's Day! We are here today to celebrate our struggles!

We are here to remember all the women, trans and non-binary people that have been fighting before us! We stand in solidarity with women around the world today who are on the streets, in the international women's strike, in every form of resistance to patriarchy, militarism, racism and capitalism.

We remember women garment workers who took the streets one century ago. Now more than ever we witness corporate abuse against our communities, our sexual rights, our labor, our bodies, and our environment.

The time has come for feminist movements to come together to stop corporations and corporate power. We know that corporate economy is exploiting and abusing people and even more so women and girls worldwide. We reject this neo-colonial economy that is based on greed, profits, war, and environmental destruction.

We reject corporate appropriation of feminism and LGBT rights and we refuse to lean in. We don't want the burden of your "economic empowerment". We already have the power and we will use it to change this economic system from the ground!

We don't want your corporate social responsibility programs. We want you to respect human rights. We want you to stop exploiting our labor and discriminating us. We want you to stop polluting our air and water and to stop stealing indigenous and community land and resources. And we are here in the United Nations today to ensure this with the legally binding treaty on TNCs and human rights!

We demand states to stop corporate capture of national governments and the United Nations itself. We demand that you put public interest and human life above corporate profits. We demand states to support the legally binding treaty to regulate corporations in international human rights law.

Feminists! Women's rights organizations! LGBTQI movements and queer activists! We are taking the stage today to invite you to join us in the struggle for the legally binding treaty on TNCs and human rights!

Demand states to support the treaty! Mobilize activist groups and civil society!
